Susan Kwek, Managing Director, Head of Operations & Technology, Citi Singapore

“Citi Singapore is delighted to have been a partner of CBP Gives since its inception in 2014. It’s a meaningful initiative that brings cheer to disadvantaged individuals and families through the fulfilments of wishes and gifts, as well as through fundraising campaigns for underserved social service organisations and sustained employee volunteerism. By working together with the CBP community of businesses, we believe we can make a difference to address various social needs in Singapore.”

Angeline Chin, Director, Head of Corporate Citizenship APAC, Credit Suisse AG

Melissa Kwee, CEO, NVPC

“Changi Business Park is a microcosm of society where many skills and resources are concentrated in one area but where neighbours may remain strangers were it not for intentional efforts to reach out, partner and share with others in need. I applaud the leaders of CBP Gives because they are truly being good neighbours and I hope to see more business clusters and communities come together to connect and give back in the neighbourhood.”

PK Raman, Regional CIO (ASEAN & South Asia), Standard Chartered Bank

“We are delighted to be part of this meaningful community initiative that showcases the power of partnership and amplification. Standard Chartered Bank has a strong culture of employee volunteering and giving back to the community. It’s fantastic to work with like-minded corporates and partners so that we can truly make a difference.”

Jeff McLean, Director of Human Resources, Asia Pacific Region, UPS

“With the ever increasing expansion of the Internet of Things (IoT) the need for all of us to interface with services providers and government agencies via applications and mobile technology is paramount, we cannot afford to have groups in the community left behind. This program targets those who are at risk of missing the digital revolution simply because they do not have the foundational skills to operate smart phones and UPS is very proud to be involved in this initiative.”
