ANNEX – Quotes from spokespersons

SCS	Dr Chong Yoke Sin, President, Singapore Computer Society, said, "Women have contributed to the development and progress of the digital economy across the entire spectrum of roles from support to leadership, in equal measure as men. The SG 100 Women in Tech list recognises these talents and aims to inspire more women to take up meaningful careers in tech that will pervade every other industry and change the way we work, live and play. SCS' Women in Tech group promotes the professional development and leadership capabilities for women and we are honoured to work with SG Women In Tech to launch this inaugural 100 Women in Tech list."
IMDA	Tan Kiat How, Chief Executive, IMDA, said, "The SG 100 Women In Tech list will showcase the breadth and depth of our talent in Singapore, and we hope that many more women will be inspired to join this sector. As we continue to live our lives amidst the COVID-19 situation, we can also draw inspiration from these women who have passion and grit in the face of challenges. We are pleased to partner the SCS and Mediacorp on this important effort."
Mediacorp	Tham Loke Kheng, Chief Executive Officer, Mediacorp, said, "Mediacorp is proud to be a part of the SG 100 Women In Tech initiative. By leveraging the breadth of our national media network, we aim to showcase the talent and achievements of the nominees, and provide greater recognition of their contributions not just to the infotech sector, but to the broader business community and society at large."
SG 100 Women In Tech Selection Committee	Lim Swee Cheang said, "I'm proud to contribute to the shaping of the SG 100 Women In Tech list. We hope to

| | unearth "heroines of tech" who are relatable and inspirational to women tech communities and the society at large, and spotlight achievements of women in tech at all levels." |
