

Dear Sir/Madam,

While you are considering the Anti-spam legislation for emails and mobile phones, why not consider the inclusion of spam via fax? Each day I receive about 5 to 7 faxes from tuition centres, t-shirt manufacturers, property agents, employment agencies and so forth. I have tried faxing them in return asking them to stop faxing me these flyers but it doesn't stopped them. I subsequently found out that these organisations pay other companies to do the distribution for them.

In addition, this form of spam is costly in the long run: the use of paper, toner, and electricity all adds to the cost to the individual or the organisation. Therefore, I would like to see this form of spamming deterred.

Thank you.

J Leong