

The Opt-out option has been proven useless. I used to have a pac-net email address. Everyday, I received ten to thirty spam mails from companies that provide loan services, viagra, penis enlargement drug etc. They all have an opt-out link. I clicked on them, entered my e-mail address and the next day, the same spam mails was sent to be from a different "sender".

I made many complaints but nothing can be done because senders' address were forged & the company denied sending spams.

I have also come to realized that the more I opt-out, the more spams I received. I believe the opt-out lists were sold or circulated to spammers, because I see similar spam victims' addresses in alphabetical order when I click "view full header".

In the end I have to cancel my email address, signed up with a new ISP for a new address, informed everybody I know of my new email address. I'd also registered with yahoo for a email address & use it whenever I need to fill up any "E-mail:" column. Just as I thought, spams invaded my yahoo address but not the other.

I would really like to know how far can you stretch your strong arms of law? Do you actually have the power to stop & punish foreign spammers.

Thanks for your time.

Vinz Lee